would love to have their own column in this magazine. My job as the editor is to try to "spread the ink around" by giving EVERYBODY a chance to be heard—not just Owen Hart!

Fax

Dear Editor,

With the current actions of the Nation of Domination falling under the category of total stupidity and little respect for authority, how can Vince McMahon and the rest of the World Wrestling Federation officials do something about this behavior? As far as I know, Federation President Gorilla Monsoon and the rest of the officials have the power to suspend or fine anyone in the Federation, so why don't they lift their fingers and hit the Nation where it hurts—in Clarence's wallet! If the Nation continues to attack anyone wherever and whenever they feel like it, I know for a fact many of the fans will only get more upset with the situation!

Chris Wilson

Saginaw, Michigan

Dear Chris,

All is fair in love and war in the World Wrestling Federation. If you're going to start fining the Nation of Domination, then you'd better be prepared to start fining EVERYBODY! At one time or another—EVERYBODY has broken a rule—or two—in the World Wrestling Federation! I guess you would say that's just the nature of the beast.

E-mail

Dear Editor,

YES!!! Bret Hart has seen the light and has reunited with Owen and the Bulldog to form the NEW Hart Foundation! But, many of the World Wrestling Federation fans like myself are wondering when this threesome will become an elite unit of four? Can't the Harts go out and recruit Jim "The Anvil" Neidhart to join them as their fourth member? I know that Sunny has said there may be a fourth member on his way, but can't anyone tell us who they are thinking about getting?

Justin Kyle Smith
Jarrettsville, MD

Dear Justin,

That's a really good question; however, by the time this magazine hits your fingers, my guess is that the mystery will already be over!

Letter

Dear Editor,

I must give credit to the Heartbreak Kid Shawn Michaels! For several months, I was one of those people who booed him in his matches. Now, I am man enough to admit that I was wrong and that I should have been cheering him all along. Now that Bret Hart's true feelings about the American fans have come out, Shawn is the only person I can truly respect when he gets on the microphone. I hate to think how the war between these two will be settled, if it ever is! Is there any way that Federation officials could end the hatred between Bret and Shawn and not have the controversy that resulted from WrestleMania XII?

Maurice Taylor
Hartford, Connecticut

Dear Maurice,

Oh, believe me, even though I don't know where, when or how, I can personally guarantee you that—IT WILL BE ENDED!!! I said it once, and I'll say it again... I don't believe the World Wrestling Federation is big enough for both Bret Hart and Shawn Michaels!

JERRY "THE KING" R TO: LAWLER

broke them again!!! You had no boundaries and no limitations! You did whatever the heck you wanted, when you wanted to do it!!! Even though you were from the south—which is a pretty lame place—you were one mean SOB!!! I had the pleasure of viewing a tape from 1981 where you and the legendary Terry Funk decided to settle your differences in an empty arena. The ensuing war was nothing short of total Armageddon, with you emerging as the only survivor! You were ahead of your time and, in my opinion, you helped pave the way for the Stone Colds of the 90s.

BUT, WHAT THE !@#$$ HAPPENED?!!!

I'll tell you what happened! They tried to make a clown out of you... AND YOU LET THEM! Here it is 1997, and they have you dressed up like you're going to an audition for a 1975 margarine commercial!!! I mean, you can't draw a better cartoon than yourself!!! C'mon, King—TELL THEM TO GO STICK IT!!! TELL THEM TO SHOW SOME RESPECT!!! Tell them if they want a comedian, then go hire Jerry "I@#$$" Seinfeld!!! Get back your dignity—GET BACK YOUR EDGE!!! If you're going to continue to call yourself a "King" then it's time for you to step up to the throne!!!

I'M BEGGIN' YA!!!

TICK...TICK...TICK... BOOM!

For over a year, the underground cult that worshipped "Time Bomb" Brian Pillman has waited patiently for the superstar to return to action following a major auto accident that not only put him out of wrestling but almost ended his life! After becoming one of the sport's most prized free agents in May 1996, Pillman agreed to a contract with the World Wrestling Federation and had plans to lace up his boots after completion of a rigorous rehabilitation program.

Just as the Time Bomb was set to detonate in the Federation, his fuse was snuffed at the hands of his former tag team partner Stone Cold Steve Austin! During an interview prior to the 1996 Survivor Series, Pillman enraged Austin to the point where Stone Cold took a steel chair to the Time Bomb's injured ankle. The attack put Pillman back in the hospital and required doctors to start from scratch with his rehabilitation. Since that time, Pillman has opted to do color commentary during Shotgun Saturday Night and the 900 Superstar Line during Pay-Per-View events. HOWEVER, his fuse would be lit once again, and it was only a matter of months before it would explode on RAW IS WAR!

During an interview involving Stone Cold this past April, Owen Hart and the British Bulldog attacked the 1996 King of the Ring from behind for injuring Bret "Hit Man" Hart. After Vince McMahon was unable to break up the fight, Shawn Michaels cleared the two Hart Foundation members out with a steel chair! As Austin was clearing his head, Pillman appeared from the crowd and savagely attacked his former "friend". Using a steel chair, the former Cincinnati Bengal had every intention of repaying his enemy with a crushed ankle of his own, but Stone Cold escaped the career-ending situation. Now that he is off his crutches and walking fine, the Time Bomb may be on his way to a showdown with the very man who put him out of action several months ago!

KEN SHAMROCK

AN INTERVIEW CONDUCTED BY VINCE RUSSO (PART 2)

Last month in Part 1 of "Beneath the Skin" with Ken Shamrock, we learned firsthand about the struggles of a tough kid from Macon, Georgia, who was literally forced to live on the streets at the tender age of 10. Sports were his only "way out" and Shamrock turned to football and wrestling as a way to "be somebody". Set back by a devastating neck injury, the determined young man was able to overcome all odds and still pursue his dream. However, a trip to the Far East would change his goals forever.

In Part 2 of this explosive interview, Shamrock will bring us into the brutal world of shoot-fighting, and give us the lowdown on how he earned the title "The World's Most Dangerous Man!"

EDITOR: How did the shoot-fighting in Japan come about?

SHAMROCK: At the time, I was involved in professional wrestling in the Carolinas. Dean Malenko and I were tag team partners.

EDITOR: Let's back up from there for a second. How did you get into professional wrestling?

SHAMROCK: Well, I had just gotten married and I was working as a bouncer in Reno, Nevada, but I was also driving back and forth to Susanville, California, because I also had a painting job there. I was traveling all over at the time, but in reality I had nothing going on. I knew I didn't want to be a bouncer or a painter all my life! I wanted to do something athletic. But I just kind of let things go by... I never pursued one thing. Then one day, my dad—who was a HUGE wrestling fan—suggested, "Hey, why don't you try and become a wrestler?" My first reaction was—"NAH." I mean, I never watched wrestling much, except when I was younger! I used to watch Pat Patterson and Moondog Mayne. [Laughing] I loved those matches because those guys were just brutal on each other!

Later on I also watched Bret Hart, and especially the British Bulldog. Well, after really thinking about what my father said, I figured—what the heck—so I gave it a shot. Around 1989 or 1990 I began to train with Mad Dog Buzz Sawyer in Sacramento, mainly because it was close. Unfortunately, that wasn't working out for me because I was just wrestling guys. I really wasn't learning anything and I wasn't receiving that much of an opportunity to go somewhere. After that, my dad made some calls and we got hold of Nelson Royal and Gene Anderson in Mooresville, North Carolina. I flew there with my father for a tryout, and they liked me. So, I went back home, gathered up my family and off I moved to North Carolina. Soon thereafter, my father sold his business and moved there with us to help me in my career. My wife and I had a baby by then, and we were all jammed in this tiny house while I'm traveling and trying to make it in wrestling. Royal and Anderson helped me out a lot! I was learning, and I actually got some matches in. That was when I got my shot in Japan with the Giant Baba's group. Once I arrived there I became frustrated early on because I just wanted to "snatch this guy" and show what I could do! But, I soon learned that's not what pro do 250 more. Of course, he's doing them right along with me trying to show me up, but I'm saying to myself [Laughing], "No way, Baby!" So my legs are wobbling and shaking, and I'm thinking—what have I gotten myself into?! But I take deep breaths, put my hands on my knees and I'M NOT STOPPING! Then, after my legs are shot, he puts me in the ring against some of his boys! I knew these guys were going to take me down, but I also knew that as soon as we get to the ground—I'm OK there! I wrestled all of them and I did very well. Even with my wobbly legs! I pretty much dominated everybody there. I mean, I'd been wrestling all my life! Three months later I went over to Japan for my first shoot-fight match and I beat the crap out of some guy. I mean this is what I did all my life and these guys are telling me they're going to pay me for this! I used to go to jail and juvenile hall for beating people up and now these guys are giving me money for it! I finally found my niche! This was it! After struggling all the way through and being too small for football, breaking my neck in wrestling and then not being able to support my family as a professional wrestler... to conquer this sport, it fit like a glove!

EDITOR: How did your wife feel about this new career in fighting?

SHAMROCK: Well, I got a tape and popped it in the VCR for my wife to look at. I told her this was something I really wanted to do before I turned it on. Then, when I pressed play, up pops this screen with two guys beating the crap out of each other. My wife is just sitting there with her mouth wide open. She looked at me and said, "You want to do this?!" I said, "Honey, I used to get in trouble for doing this—NOW THEY'RE GOING TO PAY ME!!!" After I went overseas and won my first match, my wife was overjoyed. The next time I went back, they had me fighting in a main event match! Unfortunately, the other guy won, and I went back home with two black eyes and a busted nose. When I got off the plane, my wife just looked at me in disbelief and my dad just hugged me. [Laughing] They thought I got my @#$$ kicked out of me, but I told them they should see the other guy! We had a brutal 12-minute fight. Even though I lost... for being only my second time over there doing this type of fighting—I beat the crap

thought I got my @#$$ kicked out of me, but I told them they should see the other guy!"*

out of one of their top guys! So, after that they signed me to a contract.

EDITOR: How did your fighting in Japan lead you into the Ultimate Fighting Championship in the United States?

SHAMROCK: I wrestled shoot-fighting in Japan for almost six years and I was the champion in three different organizations. In one of the organizations, they put together a tournament to crown their first champion. I went through all the other fighters to win the title, and I was honored as the first one to hold it. I was on top of the world. This is when I first heard about the UFC in the United States. I knew that it was one step up from what I was doing in Japan. So, I got into it. I won my first fight and then I lost my second one. I just wasn't prepared. I had fought in Japan and won my fight over there, and then three days later I fly from Japan to Denver—Mile High—thinking that the UFC fight was just going to be the same thing. But it wasn't. This was the knuckle-up time! This was just bare knuckles and getting after it. So, I swore to myself after that I would never lose again—and four years later—I hadn't. I was the first Superfight Champion. I retained that title through five Superfights. After that, however, it was time to make another change of scenery because, again, I wasn't making enough money to support my family. The Ultimate Fighting Championship starting going down. I liked the whole concept that they had of warriors getting in the Octagon and battling it out professionally instead of trading punches out in the middle of the street. You were able to go in there and put different disciplines up against different disciplines and have a battle! It was a war. Mono-on-mono. But because of all the problems the UFC was having with state regulations, they ended up spending all of their money in court. After a while, they weren't able to pay the talent, which was not their fault! They were just trying to keep the thing alive! But it wasn't my fault that I couldn't take care of my family every month either. So, I had to make a change. I decided I wanted to get back into pro wrestling.

EDITOR: This might be a strange question, but how does it feel to get hit in the face with a full-blown pair of knuckles?

SHAMROCK: [Laughing] People see that as being painful, but I tell you... it's not. It doesn't hurt. It's more of a stunning. If I was to walk up and hit you right now, you wouldn't feel a thing. Maybe in a day or two you may swell up and bruise, but you wouldn't feel anything when it happened. So, if you're in a fight and somebody hits you, it's more of just a stun thing and then you continue to fight. After the fight you'll feel your aches and pains. People say I'm abnormal because I don't feel pain. I mean, I feel pain, don't get me wrong; but it just doesn't alter my fighting style or my way of thinking. If something hurts I just use something else.

EDITOR: Why the change back to pro wrestling? Did you think

EDITOR: Has there EVER been a time in your life when you were afraid of something? It seems to me that even as a child living in a car you feared nothing.

SHAMROCK: You know what I was afraid of? The one thing that I'm still afraid of the most—being a failure. Dying doesn't even bother me, because I believe you go to a better place. Pain doesn't bother me because it is just an obstacle you have to get over. Failing scares me the most because I love my kids and my wife, and I don't want them to go through what I went through. Being a kid and growing up like that... not having a father... or a mother who couldn't support you. I don't want my kids to ever have to be faced with that. To me, failing my children, or my family, is what bothers me most. That is why I do what I do. That is why I move from place to place to place, because if I can't support my family by doing what I like to do, then I will do something else. I am very fortunate, and I thank God that I am able to do things that I like to do. I have been blessed and gifted. I got to fight, play football, I got to do everything I love to do and be successful at it. Now, I'm doing something that I still love! Even though I was set back because of some failures, I was able to jump back up and continue on.

EDITOR: When all is said and done with your career, how would Ken Shamrock like to be remembered?

SHAMROCK: The way I think is most respectful for people to remember someone is by the way they handled themselves in being successful. What bothers me most is when I see successful people who have made it to the top and then they kick everyone aside, such as the people who helped them get there. Obviously you have to move on, and not everyone can come with you, but nevertheless, you always have to remember those people that helped you get from place to place in this life. Everyone that I pass on my way to the top, I am going to pass right along on the way down. And when I pass them on the way down I want them to say "thank you", and for me to be able to say "thank you" I don't want them to have any bitter feelings as I go through that transition because that's the way it goes—you go up... you go down. I don't want to leave anybody thinking that I was a bad person. I pride myself on being a "tough guy" who never says quit, but I want people to remember me as being a respectful person. I believe in the idea of respect and I train my fighters that way. Anyone who doesn't respect what they do or the profession they are involved in, I don't want them anywhere around me or associated with me.

EDITOR: If tomorrow you were to run into the 10-year-old Ken Shamrock who was living out of a car, what would you say to him? What advice would you give him?

SHAMROCK: In the group home that my wife and I run, we have met several young Ken Shamrocks. The advice that I have given them doesn't necessarily mean it will work for them, because unless you have the drive that pushes you to get involved in other activities, it may not work for you. It's almost like looking down a black tunnel and not seeing any kind of light. I just tell these kids to keep going in the right direction. Eventually, they will turn the corner in that black tunnel and see the light. The light is there! Now, after they see the light, that doesn't mean that they can achieve it. They have to get there. They have to reach for it! We're trying to guide them, but it's like the blind leading the blind. They have to trust us. We might not even know where this path you're on leads because we don't know you, but we will help you down it and allow you to make that turn to the light. And then when you get it, you have to keep it! That's not an easy thing to tell that to a kid, because they've been abused and passed from group home to group home and counselor to counselor. Some may not have been good to them. I mean, I went through that. There are some that are, and some that aren't. Through their life, these kids have seen good and bad. Unfortunately, sometimes they don't know what's good or bad, and it's a hard transition to go from there to life. If it was easy... we wouldn't have all these problems. But, there really isn't just ONE thing you can say to anybody. It's a process. I was fortunate enough that after going through several different group homes I did make a decision not to do certain things. I don't know why, I just didn't like to drink, and I didn't like to do drugs. I don't know why because that would have been the easiest thing for me to do. I just didn't, but I know a lot of kids who did because it is the easiest way out. All I can say to these kids is don't ever quit, give up or blame your problems on somebody else. You have to take your life on your own shoulders because nobody else is going to carry you through life. You have to do it yourself. You have to take charge. WF only organization in the world that we WANTED to be associated with.

EDITOR: Aside from the Nation of Domination, what do you think about the current tag team ranks here in the World Wrestling Federation?

ANIMAL: The World Wrestling Federation currently has some of the toughest tag teams in the world, including Europe, Japan, anywhere! Right now, Owen Hart and the British Bulldog are the Tag Team Champs, but you have to understand the one thing that separates the Legion of Doom from every other tag team is that whether we have titles or not, you aren't a successful tag team until you've beaten Hawk and me.

HAWK: If you put any other tag team on a railroad track with a train comin' right at 'em... they're gonna jump off the track. We get on the track, same scenario, the TRAIN is gonna take a dirt road!

EDITOR: How about the Nation of Domination? Do you believe they'd jump?

HAWK: There's no doubt! They're a slew of street-wise tough guys, so we have somethin' in common—but THAT'S ABOUT IT! The Nation of Domination is gonna get DOMINATED by us, and that's the way we feel about it! We're out here to win!

We're in the prime of our lives, and the power of the World Wrestling Federation fans has rejuvenated Hawk and me! If we take that energy and turn it into a positive—there's NOBODY in this country who's gonna stop us!

EDITOR: Throughout your careers, what do you think has changed most in the sports-entertainment business?

HAWK: Well, nothing's changed with us—that's for sure—but I think it's gotten a lot more intense here in the World Wrestling Federation. You might be in the locker room with some guys and likin' them—but we're all competin' against each other! Some of us might be friends, and some of us might be enemies, but the bottom line is: when we get into the ring—WE'RE ALL ENEMIES!

MADNESS

in the world is Sycho Sid thinking?

A Commentary by Bill Banks

like the vicious Sid of old? One way or another, no one may be able to stop him when the truth is told.

To understand the latest thinking process of the West Memphis, Arkansas native, you must truly go inside the mind of a madman and dissect it as a high school biology class would. However, as much prying as one could humanly do, no medical doctor alive could truly pinpoint what an insane individual will do next. Thus, NO ONE may ever be able to truly tell us why Sid came to the Man from the Dark Side's aid after he was burned with a fireball by Mankind. There are only three ways to attain some kind of hypothesis to our problem—a face-to-face interview, question those who know him best or wait for his true intentions to be unraveled. Sadly, the latter may in fact be the only way we may ever know for sure.

Never—UNDERLINE “never”—in his career has Sid ever come to the aid of ANY man. Granted he was a bodyguard for Shawn Michaels at one time, but that was part of an employer/employee relationship. Simply put, the Heartbreak Kid PAID his bodyguard to be by his side. In fact, Sid only did it for the monetary value, and it had nothing to do with any kind of friendship the two shared. So why, after years of being his “own man”, would he come to the aid of anyone, much less the Undertaker, who defeated Sid at WrestleMania 13 for the Federation Title? With these questions in mind, the World Wrestling Federation Magazine attempted to contact Sid only days after he “rescued” the Grim Reaper from Mankind and Paul Bearer on RAW IS WAR.

OWEN HART & THE BRITISH BULLDOG (WORLD WRESTLING FEDERATION TAG TEAM CHAMPIONS) VS. THE LEGION OF DOOM

After a long period away from the sport of kings, the Legion of Doom, Animal and Hawk, were anxious to prove that they were just as tough as they were during their World Wrestling Federation Tag Team Title reign of 1991 and 1992 as they spent the early part of the match fighting through their adversaries' various offensive moves and tossing around the champs.

At one point, Bulldog draped Hawk over his shoulder and set him up for a powerslam. But Hawk slid down his opponent's back, and shoved the Bulldog into his partner. Animal joined the fray, hitting the Bulldog with a clothesline, while Hawk delivered the same maneuver from the rear. Taking the punishment a step further, Hawk twirled the Bulldog upside down and handed him to Animal, who had seated himself on the top turnbuckle. From that vantage point, Animal executed a powerslam, hooking the leg and covering the Englishman for the three-count.

It appeared that a new championship era had begun for the Legion of Doom. Animal and Hawk strapped the belts around their waists, but officials soon realized that Owen—not the Bulldog—had been the legal man in the ring, and the match was restarted. The Legion of Doom showed no sign of discouragement, handling their foes with the same ease. Animal hoisted Hart onto his shoulders, while Hawk smashed the co-titlist with a clothesline from the top rope. Before the belts could change hands, though, Bret Hart invaded the ring, attacking the Legion of Doom. The referee disqualified the champions, but—since a title can only change hands via pinfall or submission—they left with the gold.

OWEN HART:

"My loving brother, Bret, did what any caring brother would have done! He saw Animal and Hawk breaking the rules, trying to do whatever it took to take our belts away, so he merely came out to protect our well-being!"

BRITISH BULLDOG:

"These are three Harts that beat as one, and there isn't anything that anybody can do about it!"

ANIMAL:

"Even though we just beat the snot out of them, the fun hasn't even begun yet."

HAWK:

"Steve Austin is nothin' compared to the problem that Bret Hart now has with Animal and me!!! OHHH, WHAT A RUSH!!!!"

DOUBLE J JESSE JAMES VS. ROCKABILLY

The Honky Tonk Man had promised he'd get back at Double J for refusing to become the Elvis impersonator's protege. As his new charge, Honky introduced the wrestler formerly known as Billy Gunn, rechristening him "Rockabilly". This was confusing since Billy had previously rejected Honky's offers as well, but apparently the young man had reconsidered.

Rockabilly was soon on the arena floor—thanks to a series of armdrags, a dropkick and clothesline over the top rope, courtesy of Double J. From the apron, James delivered a forearm to his overmatched adversary and pointed menacingly at Honky.

Rockabilly was soon dominating the contest, wrapping a leg around the back of his opponent's head and driving it into the mat. But when Rockabilly tried Honky's signature Shake, Rattle 'n' Roll swinging neckbreaker, Double J hooked a leg around his opponent's foot and switched the momentum, scoring the win with a stunning roll-up.

Ever vengeful, Honky tried whacking the victor with a guitar after the bell, but James slipped out of harm's way, and the object crushed against the top turnbuckle.

DOUBLE J JESSE JAMES:

"I guess the 'premiere' of Rockabilly didn't go as well as expected for those two goofballs!"

ROCKABILLY:

"Sure, you're going to win a lot of matches by pulling up on a man's tights. I won quite a few that way myself!"

HONKY TONK MAN:

"It's just unbelievable! The officiatin' here in the World Wrestling Federation is just as weak as it was when I was the Greatest Intercontinental Champion of all time!"

"Come in."

The words barely spilled out of her mouth as she sat alone in the darkness on a splintered locker room bench. Her angelic face was buried deep in her hands as a puddle of sweat gathered directly below on the cold concrete floor.

"Sable, are you all right?" I asked.

"I've never been better, Vince," she said in that soft Southern drawl that has melted me like Crisco at least a hundred times before.

"You've got to work, Vince. Nobody is going to hand anything to you," she continued as she wiped the beautiful golden locks from her eyes. "Marc tells me that every day. If I'm going to be an asset to him... as well as myself, then I'm going to have to work my butt off for it."

person who means the most to you. Perhaps even the one you love. Perhaps even... Sable.

It appears that Sable has made the North Area Athletic Club her new mailing address at the request of the man she trusts most—Marc Mero. Following a "misunderstanding" (as Mero calls it) on Shotgun Saturday Night at the beginning of the year, both Sable and Mero came to the agreement that from here on, Sable herself was going to become more aggressive in order to help the couple's cause. While Marc would be taking care of business on the inside of the ring... Sable would be taking care of it on the outside. Unfortunately, at the time little did Sable realize but Mero would suffer a severe knee injury only weeks later, causing her "Wildman" to concentrate more on their pact, or more specifically, HER END of it.

Since his setback, Mero has not left Sable's side at the club, driving her much the same way Rinaldi drove him some 15 years ago. From eight in the morning until six at night, Mero works Sable until the luscious lioness can barely stand on her own.

"It's for your own good," he yells in her ear. "If you want it, Sable, you've got to grab it! Nothing—NOTHING—is handed to you in life!"

But does SABLE want it? Or is it the "Wildman's" desire to get it?

Don't answer that so quickly. As a matter of fact, think about it for a second. If Sable doesn't want to do it... she doesn't have to. The fact is,

Sable has already made a name for herself here in the World Wrestling Federation. She was the Queen of the Slammys, a night when she truly came into her own. She is a star WITH, or WITHOUT, Marc Mero. So then... why is she doing this? What is her motive? Well, in my opinion, there could be two.

Sable could be doing this strictly out of her love for Marc Mero, OR Sable could be doing this simply for... Sable. Does Sable have ulterior motives? Is Sable using Mero's aggression to drive her own career? Is Sable herself looking to become a lean, mean, fighting machine in order to gain the attention of perhaps some other World Wrestling Federation superstar... or more specifically World Wrestling Federation CHAMPION?! Well, that's what the Informer thinks! In the latest issue of the Raw Magazine, the "man in the know" is convinced that Sable has her sights set on none other than... THE UNDERTAKER, and that she is simply using Mero as a stepping stone to the "Dark Side"!!! He states that the former Intercontinental Champion is driving Sable AT HER REQUEST and that out of HIS endless love for HER, he is merely seeing this as a way to build up Sable's lack of self-confidence—something which personally plagues the blonde beauty behind the scenes! Now, does this theory pull any weight? You bet it does, especially considering that Mero was the one who rescued Sable when she was being used and abused by Hunter Hearst-Helmsley. AND Mero was the one who perched her high on a pedestal, putting her in a position where she could become a "star" in her own right!!!

So then—WHO'S USING WHO—IF ANYBODY'S EVEN USING ANYBODY AT ALL?!

Look... here's the truth—the "bottom line", if you will: if it looks like I'm all over the place and I'm really not sure what the heck's going on here—GUESS WHAT—YOU'RE ABSOLUTELY RIGHT!!! However, one thing I do know for certain is—SOMETHIN' FUNKY'S GOIN' ON AT THE NORTH AREA ATHLETIC CLUB!!!

Yo, MICK—where are ya when we need ya?!!! WF

A generation ago, "It Came From The 80s" star Cyndi Lauper coined the phrase "Girls Just Wanna Have Fun". Those five words became something of an anthem for teens who were fed up with the pressures of school, relationships and their parents. Now, more than ten years later, in the 90s, could Mosh and Thrasher, the Headbangers, establish a new catch phrase, such as "Guys just want to puke on each other!", for a new evolution of young minds?

Scary, isn't it? However, little do you realize that New York, Los Angeles, Dallas, Chicago and the rest of the major cities in this star-spangled country are littered with millions who resemble this Federation tag team. Much like the "cruisers" of the 50s and the "flower children" and the "hippies" of the 60s and 70s, Mosh, Thrasher and the rest of America's youth are ready to inherit the planet! And oh, by the way, did we mention that they are at the front door, maybe even ready to take your daughter out on a date?

Stand up and take a bow, Mom and Pop! Thanks to your intelligent efforts in the 70s and 80s, YOU MADE Generation X! With your toxic waste dumps, nuclear power plants and crooked government, is it any wonder that the youth of today are tattooing, piercing and dyeing any and every crevice on their bodies just to drive you up your precious stain-resistant walls? And if you think this is just a "phase" for your little angel, think again, because last time we checked, there are still MILLIONS of people walking around feeling the effects of the 70s! You're not in Kansas anymore, Toto, SO DEAL WITH WHAT YOUR KIDS HAVE BECOME!

Mosh and Thrasher resemble everything the nightmare of Generation X has become to parents. They have nose rings, they wear make-up and, most important, they dabble in using bodily fluids as an "art form"! These characteristics, the Headbangers claim, were all learned in the clubs and mosh pits of America, dancing—or fighting—to the metal meltdown of Pantera, Marilyn Manson and White Zombie, among others. While other old farts chose to turn their backs on a generation they didn't want to even begin to understand, Mosh and Thrasher looked to the uncontrolled chaos of the pits to fit in. After getting that adrenaline rush, the world of professional wrestling was the next logical step for the two.

"After so many gigs, me and Mosh needed tougher skins to beat on," Thrasher said. "People were always asking us if we were wrestlers because of the way we ROCKED THEIR SOCKS OFF, so we figured we would leave the pits behind and give the turnbuckles a try!!!"

Taking their elbows and boots to the ring, the Headbangers were soon breaking opponents' bones

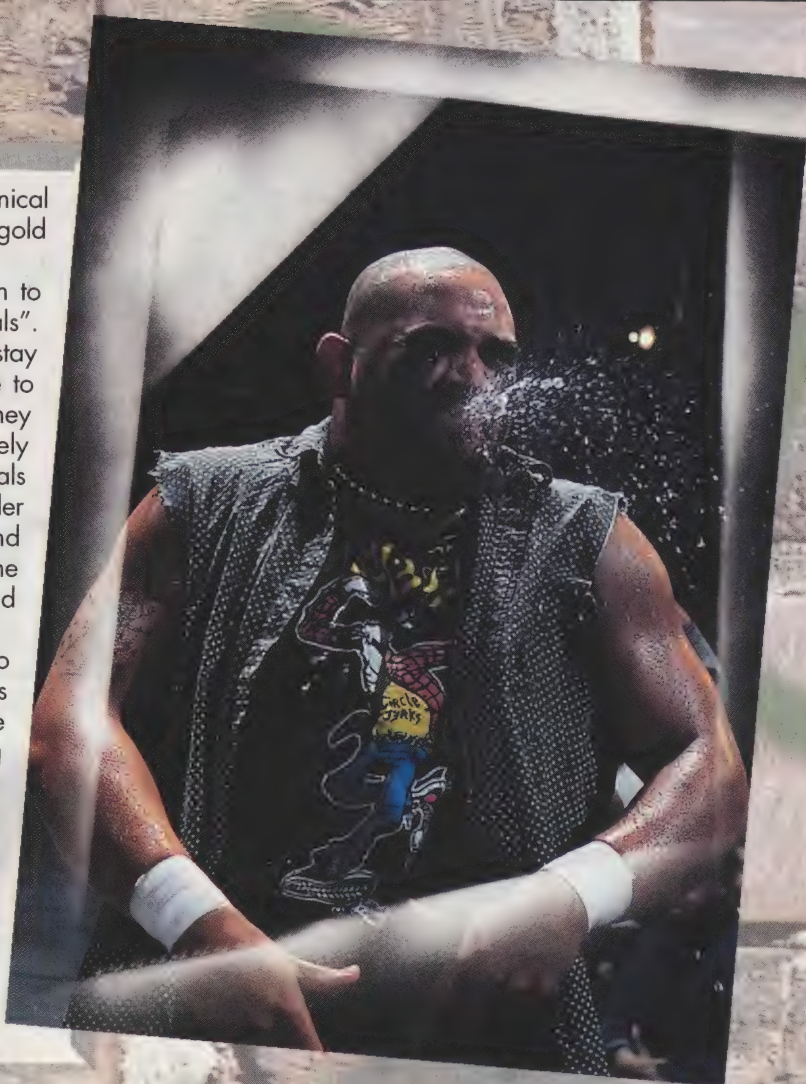

But, some critics say, because they didn't possess the technical background, they weren't able to take the Federation gold from Owen Hart and British Bulldog the following night.

Fortunately for both parties, there may be a solution to satisfy the Princes of Puke and the "overbearing officials". If the Headbangers continue to develop their skills and stay focused on their matches, they COULD realistically rise to the top of the Federation with time. However, what if they could receive an extra "boost" from a manager, namely Sunny, Clarence Mason or Jim Cornette? Think of the goals these two could accomplish if a manager took them under his/her wings! It's like a Bill Parcells coming along and lifting the New York Jets out of shame! A true miracle in the making! The only question is: WHO in their right mind could get along with these two?

Due to their instant success in the Federation, one has to wonder where the Headbangers will end up ten years down the "tour". Can Generation X continue to survive in a world infested with rich old men bent on destroying the planet? Or will they take over and inherit the earth, making tattooed foreheads and pierced lips a must for the business class? The Headbangers' first step toward that goal begins in the World Wrestling Federation and with time, they may be holding the gold one day!

With all that fame and fortune, how much longer before YOU, the parents of America, are calling Mosh or Thrasher... SON-IN-LAW? WF mately 180 pounds of shredded muscle—reached out and man-handled the cigar-smoking manager in a way that had never been witnessed before. Security guards rushed to the trouble spot and, with much difficulty—due in part to her size and strength—ejected her from the building.

Most people would have learned their lesson, especially after spending time in lockup. But Chyna is different. From what World Wrestling Federation Magazine has discovered, Chyna bonded herself out of jail and promptly drove to the next city where the Federation superstars were scheduled to compete. Then, once again on RAW, Chyna showed the world her mean streak by jumping all barricades... and getting to the petite director yet again.

This time, Chyna left a lasting impression: her assault was so vicious and unexpected that Hunter Hearst-Helmsley had to stand up and take notice. The Greenwich Snob was in the market for a bodyguard and, in his opinion, no one could fit the bill better than this she-beast!

Since then, Chyna has catapulted into the spotlight. She has shown that fear is a word and emotion that she does not care to learn. On several occasions, she has stood toe-to-toe with such monolithic Federation superstars as Bret "Hit Man" Hart—former three-time Federation Champion—and even, most recently, with the Undertaker. Moreover, she has even tangled with superstars of the opposite sex during matches in which her man Hunter has competed. For example, slicking her hair back so that nobody would know she was a woman... she began to wrestle men. One of our sources, who has asked to remain anonymous, told us that not only was this the greatest thrill of Chyna's career... but that she also broke some bones along the way!

From there, Chyna set her sights on the World Wrestling Federation.

"I was looking for someone to watch my back and someone who wasn't going to back away from anybody," said Hunter Hearst-Helmsley. "That was Chyna. She proved to me that she'd take a whack at any man or woman, regardless of the circumstances!

"The world has never seen an athlete like her," he goes on. "And I can guarantee that no one ever will!" WF

As the day wore on, the locals decided to invite the superstars to their homes for dinner and entertainment. Among those who got to experience the wealthy lifestyle of these Kuwaitis were Tiger Ali Singh and legendary grappler George "The Animal" Steele, both of whom were treated like royalty by the sheiks for taking personal time out to meet the fans during the tour.

"These people have adapted to a land so hot and dry that you have to respect them," Tiger Ali said. "I enjoyed every moment I spent learning about the way they lived, and I hope the Federation returns here soon! I'm proud that these same people cheered me on when I won the Kuwaiti Cup Tournament.
